BOBTAIL CARS MUST GO.

"THE EVENING WORLD'S" CRUSADE AGAINST THEM PROGRESSING.

Consternation Caused Among the Officers of the Twenty-third Street Company, and Their Lawyer Despatched to the Corener's Office-Many Letters Urging on the Crusade-Another Accident.

The announcement that THE EVENING World was to employ more effective weapons than words in an attempt to abate the bobtail car system in this city fell like a bomb in the camp of the Twenty-third Street Railway officials yesterday.

They recognized at once that they had a harder fight on their hands than has before been made against them.

It is not now a question of screening the system behind an innocent, overworked driver, but something of much more impordriver, but something of much more impor-tance—whether they shall or shall not be de-clared felons and homicides under the law. When THE EVENING WORLD'S announce-ment that its crusade was commenced was made the railroad corporation's counsel, Mr. George W. Connor, hastened to the Coroner's office to ascertain what steps had been taken to secure the indictment of its officials.

He there learned that Coroner Messemer He there learned that Coroner Messemer is heart and hand with THE EVENING WORLD in its effort to rid the metropolis of these conductorless abominations, and had taken measures to secure all the evidence that would place the blame for the killing of Mrs. Levy upon the proper parties.

quest of The Evening World Coroner Messemer has asked for the attendance of an Assistant District-Attorney to protect the interest of the people and to-day Assistant District-Attorney Fitzgerald, who is in charge of the District-Attorney's effice during Col. Fellows's absence, signified his willingness to assign an assistant to the case. Coroner Messemer is in receipt of a large number of letters asking him to make a most thorough and searching investigation into the death of Mrs. Levy.

The Evening World, too, has received many communications on the subject, of which the following are a few:

To the Editor of The Ecouina World:
Within the last hour a lady attempted to alight from a Twenty-third street car immediately in front of my residence.

The car started before she had left it. She was pitched violently forward and, in her fright, caught hold of the railing and was dragged between thirty and forty feet before she was heard or observed by and forty feet before she was heard or observed by a passenger, who then stopped the car.

Is not this a forcible comment upon the infamous conductoriess system? Wond a such an accident be likely to occur with a conductor in charge?

Keep up your crussale against the oursgeous farting of all companies who perest in running the objectionable car. Force them to realize that such autocracy will not be tolerated.

You have the commendation and "God speed" of all who are not interested in the stock of the railroad companies.

Your remarks in this evening's World regarding the "bo tail car" meet with my destriced approval, and I hoje you will be successful in abolishing this huisance. Very respectfully. E.D. New York, July 1

Fethe Editor of The Evening World:

I thoroughly approve of your denunciation of the "bobtali" cars, as they are a public

of the "bootsil" cars, as they are a public nulsance.

Now, I happen to pass through Twenty-third street night and morning and cas witness a great many things detrimental to the public interest from their use.

For instance, in the morning and evening they are of no use whatever, because, being so small, they are packed to the back railing with men and boys, so that girls and women who have to work cannot get on and have to walk all the way to their place of business, arriving completely tired out.

Keep up the fight and drive them off the street, so that, with proper conductors and long cars. eo that, with proper conductors and long cars, person can ride occasionally. H. B. W. New York, July 16,

CONFUSION ON THE BRIDGE.

A Runaway Horse, a Broken Wagon and Two Frightened Boys.

Shouts of alarm from foot passengers near the tower at the Brooklyn end of the bridge and a general rush for the parapet which overlooks the northerly carriage road were the first indications of an exciting runaway case this morning.

It was about 10.30 o'clock and a light furniture wagon, with two boys in it, had driven in by the Sands street entrance at the Brooklyn side a few minutes previously.

The wagon was half full of bed springs and bore the name of Worth Brothers, of 107 held the reins, and the other boy was his friend and companion.

The small bay horse attached to the wagon was rather spirited and he shied as he caught sight of the strange surroundings and the trains whizzing nomentarily by.

The lads were inexperienced drivers, and when the horse bolted Charlie threw up the reins and both thought only of getting out.

The little bay rushed along the roadway at headlong speed, scattering the other vehicles in a surprising manner.

A heavy truck near the New York tower was slowly 'jogging along, and horse and wagon dashed into it.

The wagon got the worst of it. It was smashed in pieces, and the horse was badly out. By little less than a miracle both lads were unhurt.

RUSSIAN ARMS OPEN TO WILLIAM.

Preparations for Welcoming the German Emperor at St. Petersburg. IBY CABLE TO THE PRESS NEWS ASSOCIATION,]

St. Petensburo, July 17 .- All Russia is looking with most friendly feelings to the coming of the German Emperor. No visit of foreign potentate within the present generation has been more popular.

There is no drawback of hesitation or distrust. It is accepted by all, princes as well as people, as a frank and open advance towards permanent friendship between Germany and Russia, and no suspicion of ulterior motives is entertained.

The Journal de St. Petersbourg gives utterance to all this feeling in an article welcoming the Emperor to Russia in sympathetic terms, and expressing the hope that the meeting of the Czar and Kaiser will be a fresh confirmation of universal peace.

The Russian fleet, with the Imperial yacht Deeshaya, is ready, with steam up, to go forth and meet the German squadron the instant its approach is signalled.

EMIGRATION IN PARLIAMENT. Debate in the House of Commons on the Subject of Assisting Emigrants. (BY CABLE TO THE PRESS NEWS ASSOCIATION.) LONDON, July 17.-There was a long debate in the House of Commons last night on the clause of Local Government bill empowering county councils to advance money to emigrants. Strong objection was raised by Radical members to local rates being applied to assisting emigration.

The Government agreed to restrict the peration of the clause to cases where a local or colonial guarantee for repayment would be given.

Mr. Samuel Smith proposed to authorize the councils to make grants in aid of the emigration of children. The Government sympathized with the object, but there were technical objections.

HEALING THE BABES

"The Evening World" Physician Makes His First Visits.

Alling Children of the Big Tenemonts Receive Free Treatment.

Pathetic Pictures of Child Life Among the Very Poor.

The first of the daily visits of THE EVENIOR World physician to the tenements of the poor, in an endeavor to save the lives of the sick children who there abound, was made vesterday.

The section of the city visited is located in the Twelfth Police Precinct, which is almost entirely a tenement-house district.

At the Delancey street station-house the Sergeant in charge directed THE EVENING World physician and the reporter to Goerck street and Suffolk street as the most promising field for the work. In both streets there are towering tenements filled to overflowing with human beings; families of six to a dozen being crowded into two or three small, illventilated rooms.

HAD ALBEADY HEARD OF IT. English is, perhaps, the least spoken of any language in this section, but THE EVEN-ING WORLD doctor could wind his tongue around a few German words, and he learned around a few German words, and he learned from the people that he called upon that they already knew of The Evenino World's charitable enterprise in furnishing a physician free for the children of the poor, and some said they had been expecting his visit. A big block of tenements on the east side of Goerck street, between Delancey and Rivington streets, was the first visited.

Something less than a hundred little ones were playing about on the sidewalk and in were playing about on the sidewalk and in the gutter, while babies galore reposed in the laps of mothers who were airing themselves in the front doorways.

"Are there any children sick here?" was the question asked of the women who sat at the doors.

One woman said that there was a little sick baby in No. 66, and into that tenement The Evening World men—doctor and reporter—

A WOEFUL BIT OF HUMANITY.

There was the baby, a little bundle of skin and bones of about five pounds weight—a woeful looking object—fussing and crying in its weak way in the arms of its mother.

The child had suffered from diphtheria, and had never recovered fully from the effects of that disease.

The mother declared her inability to pay a physician for his services, and the babe's illness was prescribed for.

By this time it was generally known that The Evening World's physician was in the building and his services were in constant demand for ailing babies.

On the third floor a little girl baby in a family named Gutmann was ill with intestinal trouble, and she was looked after, the mother saying that her husband was in New Jersey and that she had been unable to employ a physician to attend her child

On the same floor a little boy lately recovered from the measles was very ill with a stomach trouble, and on the floor below a little girl was suffering the double affliction of a bronchial difficulty and an intestinal disorder.

All declared their inability to employ a

All declared their inability to employ a physician—for The Evening Would does not desire, in the furtherance of this charitable urpose, to interfere with the practice of any physician—and each was given a prescrip-tion, which was honored by the Eastern Dis-pensary at Grand and Essex streets. IN THE ABODE OF POVERTY. They need not have declared their poverty, it was apparent in their dress and the scanty furniture of their narrow apartments. A furniture of their narrow apartments. A bed, two or three chairs or stools; these comprised about all of the furniture where The Evening World representatives were admitted. Occasionally an oil stove was found, but frequently the only arrangement for cooking consisted of some bricks piled up loosely in a fireplace on which meat might be broiled or fried.

It was growing dark when the doctor left the vicinity of Goerek street, and but little time was left for the few visits which were made at the big tenements in Suffolk street, This neighborhood will be revisited by the doctor.

One thing which this trip among the tenements revealed was that the Board of Health has failed in requiring the vaccination of the children in this neighborhood for two years. BEGINNING OF THE EXTRA SESSION. Gov. Hill's Message Calls For a Prison Ap prepriation.

[SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.] ALBANY, July 17 .- The Legislature began its session to-day promptly at 11 o'clock. The Assembly tucked itself away in the pretty but stuffy little Court of Appeals room, while the Senate occupied its onyx chamber as of yore.

The Lieutenant-Governor and Speaker Cole each delivered brief addresses, distinctly stating that no subjects could be touched upon beside those recommended in the

STATE OF NEW YORK.

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER,
ALEANY, July 17, 1882.

To the Legislature—Pursuant to the power vested in me by Section 4 of Article 4 of the Constitution you have been convened in extraordinary session.
The first subject recommended for your consideration is the proper employment of convicts in the penal institutions of the State and the making of whatever appropriation may be necessary to prevent the prisoners remaining in idleness.
I have received from the Superintendent of State Prisons a communication relating to the condition os the prisons, a copy of which is herewith transmitted for your information.

Should I conclude it necessary, I shall hereafter during the extraordinary session recommend other subjects for your consideration.

Mr. Lyman has a passion for jets, and they include a handsome Irish setter, a giant Newfour dland dog, half a dozen canaries, two college-bred parrots, three kittens, a Maltese, Angora and a torouse-shell; a six-foot alligator, and a cute little Marmoset that roams at will and has aiready long-shell; a six-foot alligator, and a cute little Marmoset that roams at will and has aiready learned to ape the mid-air antics of Blondin.

Since the season opened Mr. Clancy as from time to time missed small trinkets and knick-knacks which adorn the booth and go to the lucky throwers of wooden pretzies. These petty rouberies invariably occurred during the night, while the booth was locked, but careful inspection of the place always failed to reveal a cine to the thief's method. At last Clancy reported the matter to the police, and, though a strict watch was kept upon the place, the thefts continued. No one was seen to enter the place or leave and the proprietor and the rolice were puzzled. The visits of the robber then ceased for a week.

Yesterday morning Mr. Clancy visited his booth as usual and busied himself arranging the enticing prizes for the rush of visitors. He soon discovered that several fine penknives were missing, and once again he vowed vengeance on the unknown thef, when he was startled by an object which unclaried itself from a convenient shelf, and rubbing its eyes in mock gravity, gazed in apisu surprise at him. In one nand was casped tight a penknife with open blade. To his surprise it was Supervisor Lyman's monkey and the burglar at the same time. As the Supervisor's hotel was not yet open Clancy carried his monkeyship to Police Headquarters and placed him in charge of Warden Murphy, who entered nim upon the blotter as 'Jacko Lyman, age unknown, occupation none, residence Concy Island, singe black, can heither read nor write, charge larcent."

Mr. Lyman was notified while at breakfast and haster, d to redeem his pet, which he did, not forgetting to reinburse Clancy for his losses.

Jack Lewis, a colored man twenty-five years old, is the prisoner. He shot and killed his former paramour, Alice Jackson, this morning at 9.05 o'clock, in the hallway of the three-story brick building at 84 West Third street, where the girl was employed as a cook.

Lewis is a very inferior darkey, extremely black, short and slender. His victim was thirty-five years old and plain-looking.

The two had known each other for five years and lived together as man and wife in Sing Sing. A few months ago they moved to New York and located on Grand street, near Wegster.

Jack says that Alice left him two months ago and went to live with another man. He has since been living at High Bridge, but has been doing no work.

This morning he met Alice near her house and walked with her on the pretense that he wanted his umbrella, which she had.

When they got into the hallway Lewis accused Alice of living with another man, and he says he reminded her of her threats to kill him if he ever lived with another woman.

The woman became frightened at his manner, and screamed "Murder!" at the top of her voice, when Lewis drew a revolver and shot her in the breast.

She turned and started to run, when he shot her again in the body and she fell bleeding and unconscious to the floor.

The woman's screams and the pistol shots aroused the whole neighborhood, and before Lewis could make his escape he was arrested.

An ambulance was summoned, and Alice Jackson, in a dying condition, was taken to St. Vincent's. She was unconscious, and died soon after reaching the hospital.

Lewis was taken to Jefferson Market Police Court and remanded by Justice Ford.

He talked freely about his cowardly deed and said he just wanted to "prick her a little."

A week ago Lewis called at the West Third street house and had a stormy interview with Alice. He flourished a revolver and threat-ened to kill her unless she promised to be:

The policeman took Jack into custody, led him as far as Thompson street and let him go, warning him if he returned to that neigh-borhood he would 'Take him in." This did not satisfy Alice, and on Saturday she went before a Police Justice and swore out a warrant for Lewis's arrest. He heard of this action and started out last night bent upon carrying his sanguinary threat into ex-
